It's halfway through L'Oréal Fashion Week and the fashion crowd is pumped. The whole international theme started rocking on Monday with the stark and sexy collection of Russian designer Max Chernitsov. Later that night everyone, including students from four Milan-based fashion schools, hit Holt Renfrew for a cocktail reception honouring Elio Fiorucci. Known for his colourful pop fashions, the designer and retailer is famous for kicking it up old school with the likes of Andy Warhol, Vivienne Westwood and Madonna. Then it was back to the tents for the Joe Fresh show – and after-party.
